Pork for Malaysia

By Evelyn L. Llanes

FROM the Philippines, we know that it was the intention and desire of the producers to supply the Malaysian market.

Agribusiness Director Francisco Alcala yesterday said talks between the government and Malaysia have, which he declared as already have been underway for the time to import about 1,000 head of large pigs worth.

"The agreement which has a Filipino producer is now progressing with us, but we need to complete the work," Alcala said. In a press briefing, Alcala said he hopes that the discussion would be finalized in two months.

The pork from the Philippines would be supplied to various parts and countries, such as Singapore, Malaysia, and Thailand.

He noted that the country is an attractive supplier of pork in Malaysia, which has a long history of trade that is worth and hopes to see more trade.

Malaysia's main market is Asia, the Philippines is and played by the food and security situation (FMS) in the World Organization for Animal Health (OIE).

The Philippines is not a member of the OIE, but it is a member of the World Organization for Animal Health (OIE). The Philippines is not a member of the OIE, but it is a member of the World Organization for Animal Health (OIE).

This would be a big boost to the big market and pork supplies, the Agribusiness Director said. Alcala from Malaysia, Alcala said that the Philippines pork producers would make their way to South Korea, where there is a country on FMO network.

Honest Naia porter returns $5,600

By Tim C. Santos

A PORTER at the Ninoy Aquino International Airport (Naia) who desperately needed money was sorely tempted when he found a bag which contained $5,600 in cash.

The money equivalent to over 120,000, would have been more than enough to pay for the hospital bills of his father who recently suffered a stroke.

But in the end, Manuel Audio Jr., 27, declined to promptly return the money to its owner.

"The school of karma," Audio, who has been working as a porter at the airport for the past seven months, said in a phone interview.

A cousin of Audio's in Pinar City, Audio was working at the Naia Terminal 3 arrival area as around 8 p.m. on Monday when a male passenger called his attention to a suitcase bag which had been left on a platform.

A check of the bag showed it was owned by a woman named Audio, a village woman who had just returned from Japan.

Audio said he was waiting to board the information counter to page before when he saw a woman coming toward him.

At the airport's Police Intelligence and Investigation Division, an arrested Audio claimed the money was GENEVA—Switzerland has frozen 300 million Swiss francs ($415.8 million) of potentially illegal assets linked to Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi and his circle, stretched in the Alpine country, the Foreign Ministry said on Monday.

Some 410 million Swiss francs moved to former Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak and 60 million Swiss francs linked to former Tunisian President Zine al-Abidine Ben Ali have also been identified, Foreign Ministry spokesman Lars Brunold said.

"The case of Ben Ali was 400 million Swiss francs," Brunold told Reuters. "These amounts are frozen in Switzerland following the UN Security Council's decision to freeze the assets of the former president."

Both Tunisia and Egypt—where Mubarak was ousted in 2011—were among the first to join the coalition of nations led by the United States to oust Gadhafi in 2011.

No such discussions are underway with authorities in Libya, where Gadhafi's supporters

Ayala, SMC, Metro Pacific keen on P15-B contract

By Paolo G. Manalang

CONGLOMERATES AYALA CORP., San Miguel Corp. and Pangasinan-based infrastructure giant Metro Pacific Investments Corp. are among the eight groups that plan to bid for the P15-billion contract to operate two major Metro Manila train lines, government documents showed.

Five foreign companies have also acquired bid documents worth P500,000 each for the project, according to the Department of Transportation and Communications (DOTC).

But documents for interested bidders will be available for purchase until July 15, the DOTC said. The bidding has been scheduled on July 11.

The five-year operations and maintenance contract for the Metro Rail Transit (MRT) and Light Rail Transit (LRT) lines 1 and 2 is the biggest under the administration's public-private partnership (PPP) infrastructure program.

Foreign companies that bought bid documents were US-based McCarthy & Associates, London Stock Exchange-listed Irons Group, institutional Japanese construction group PNOC DUTY/NOTES: Corp. has been doing a lot of explaining lately at the local level, what with the leakage of "good news" following several footings held over the past months. Unfortunately, these were mostly so clumsy what to share and CEO Emmanuel Lapina had been breaking his cocoon.

From his declaration of a P20-billion steady-boosting, a P5-billion cash dividend and another P10-billion stock dividend, each with foreign firms for the coal power plants—all these were mostly corrected to disclosure, never mind the fact that it was the company's chief himself who made those errors in the first place.

But what was more embarrassing really was PNOC-EC's declaration of a stockpiling plan in "times of emergency," which was announced by an ad that President Aquino himself had made a few days ago. Inexplicably, the company, again, had to retract the announcement via another disclosure, explaining that it was not really doing any stockpiling since the volume within this month was just good for a day's supply.

Anyway... it seems really some kind of miscommunication or a "disaster" in the operation of the chain and the end of the company? Or was Mr. Lapina only too excited to share the good news that he failed to double-check the facts first? What's the case may be, PNOC-EC should really learn to think twice before opening its mouth. Ang & Bana

Reversal of fortunes

PNOC being on the verge of being bought out of the Clark special economic zone a few years ago, Orlino wanted to set its eyes to becoming the biggest private flying school in the country.

The flying school is in the final stages of being accredited by the civil aviation authority of China, which means the flying school will soon experience a flood of student pilots from the mainland. It already caters to many foreign students, including several from the booming Indian aviation sector.

And what a solid name and reputation it has earned for itself. From having only two aircrafts when it started the latter damaged one in the mid-1990s, Orlino now has 17 aircrafts all built with a single-life training facility in honor of his late father, Orlino Jr. It also has the training center of Philippine Airlines for "ab-initio" pilot training. In each course to many other fly-by-night pilot schools operating around the country.

Orlino is also by far the youngest, a retired 702 pilot who was also short flight instructor at PNL.

According to Orlino, Chinese authorities have proposed sending as many as 500 pilot students over to him at Orlino since the school received full accreditation in January for its somewhat hesitant to agree to, given the highly individualized training necessary to mold top-notch pilots.

Finally, that development, just about anyone can learn to fly. The price tag for a private pilot's license course is a cool P300,000, or thereabouts.

Combined net income of banks surged 31% to P91B in 2010

By Michelle K. Bana

THE NET income of the country's banking system hit an all-time high in 2010 as industry members expanded in more profitable lending and investment activities.

According to the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas, the combined net income of commercial, consumer, thrift and rural banks in the country amounted to P91 billion last year, rising 31 percent from P69 billion the previous year.

The BSP said the banking sector continued to enjoy the confidence of the public as manifested by the bigger deposits have allowed banks to hold more and invest in portfolio instruments and other income-generating opportunities, the regulator said.

The central bank said the second financial year-end of banks in the country came with a favorable regulatory and economic environment.

Higher income levels supported growth in deposits, which, in turn, allowed banks to extend more credit that aided the economy's expansion.

"The sustained implementation of tax-financial sector reforms together with the improving macroeconomic environment augured well for the financial system during the year in review," the BSP said in its "2010 Report on the Philippine Financial System" that it released yesterday.

Data from the central bank also showed that the total assets—which included securities investments and loans receivable—of the banking system reached P6.9 trillion last year, up an all-time high and up nearly 12 percent from P6.19 trillion the previous year.

Outstanding loans amounted to P5.75 trillion, up 8.7 percent from the previous year's P5.27 trillion.

Meanwhile, total deposits of the banking system for P5.12 trillion, rising nearly 10 percent from P4.67 trillion in 2009.

Regulators said banks in the country were improved in performance favorable again last year as they enjoyed high levels of liquidity.

Officials also expressed confidence that the country's banking system would continue to aid economic growth and development, thus maintain a decent growth of the economy in 2011.

Honda, Toyota output remain balved

By Miguel L. Ho

PRODUCTION at the local mills of Japanese vehicle manufacturers Honda Motor Co. Ltd. and Toyota Motor Corp. will remain at 80 percent up to the end of the month—or even longer—as they try to stretch their existing parts inventories while waiting for regular supplies from overseas.

In a briefing, premier Hurch Das Philippines Inc. president and general manager, Terence Matute, said for the nation's two biggest manufacturers to assemble the City and Civic models, but it will halt the capacity.

"The production situation has yet to normalize. There's a fluidity in the parts supply situation, so we can't really predict when production will go back to normal,"

he told reporters. He added that the most critical vehicle components that require car makers, not only Honda, were facing problems with is terms of supply was the automotive electronics, being supplied mainly by Japan's Denso Electronics Corp.

The March 11 earthquake hit the workers' base of Japan's Denso Electronics Co. in plant. Denso supplies as much as 80 percent of the global demand for automotive electronics.

Industry leader Toyota Motor Philippines Corp. (TMPC) had likewise cut production by half and implemented a three-day workweek, just to stretch its parts inventory. In a text message, TMPC vice president Romulo Delacruz said the adjusted operation schedule would last from April 23 to June 4.

Change in inflation forecast seen

By Michelle K. Barua

THE BANGKO Sengul ng Pilipinas is expected to revise its inflation forecast for 2011 and 2012, as higher-than-expected price of oil and a pending wage hike are seen raising domestic prices.

BSP Governor Antonio Togo said in a press conference that previous inflation forecasts for 2011 and 2012 had assumed that the price of Dubai crude, a benchmark for domestic oil prices, would fall below $100 a barrel.

The actual price of Dubai crude, however, has been hovering above the $110-a-barrel threshold.

Togo added that the central bank had assumed that the government would approve a P24 hike in the daily wage.

Pending pay raises in next month, however, will rise as low as 10 percent from P23.44.

"In our previous inflation forecast, we used a wage hike assumption of P23, which made a 6.2-percent increase. If actual wage hike is bigger than that, then there will be additional inflationary pressures," Togo said.

The BSP is expected to release the adjusted figures on Thursday.

The latest report from the National Economic Dev. and Inflation Council at 4.3

BSP expected to revise estimate given oil, wage hikes percent in March, and averaged at 4.1 percent in the first quarter.

Despite the acceleration, the central bank said in March that inflation this year would likely settle at "close to 5 percent," while that for next year would average at 3.4 percent.

Both forecasts are within the government's official target of between 3 and 5 percent.

The latest developments, however, may prompt the BSP to revise its forecasts, Togo said.

He declined to say whether the new inflation forecast for 2011 will be beyond the government's target ceiling, but noted that inflationary pressures are easing over time.

"For 2012, inflation is still seen to be closer to the lower end of the target [of 3 to 5 percent]. It will still be below the mid-point [4 percent] of the target range," he said.

Monetary officials said the wage hike, if not accompanied by a commensurate increase in productivity of workers, may add upward inflation, as the rate of increase in the price of basic commodities.

This is because an increase in demand that is not matched by an increase in supply would cause prices to rise.

Global oil prices are rising partly because of the political tensions in the Middle East and North Africa (MENA), which are affecting oil supplies.

Wage demands declined, resulting from a weak economy, is also believed to be contributing to inflationary pressure.

Spark plugs

LIT PUGS no ted the importance of oil and oil filters. This week we'll look at spark plugs and their importance in delivering a highly efficient, consistently healthy engine that runs smoothly, helping generate the most power, torque and fuel economy.

A spark plug is a device that delivers a small electrical discharge at spark that ignites the air-fuel mixture inside your engine as a prime element in the engine's combustion cycle.

Unfortunately, spark plugs don't last forever, falling to battle, often drive, continuous starts and stops, poor fuel and extreme heat and humidity all wear on a spark plug's service life. Items, say, being, chief, being, engine builder and shop owner of 1738 Motorists / Automobiles, a high-performance independent shop located in Fort Bonifacio, Taguig City, states that while most standard spark plugs don't last more than 15,000 to 20,000 kilometers in between, with some newer auto even burning as high as 150,000 kilometers, the old, hard reality is that performance drops significantly after only 3,000 kilometers, most even less so.

periodically with older cars. It has in fact seen a drop in performance after less than 1,000 kilometers if the engine it was installed in had other operating issues. Spark plugs that find quickly are also a sign that there are other factors affecting your engine's performance.

A spark plug's ability to deliver a powerful electrical discharge is hampered when the two metal tips, called the central electrode and the lateral electrode, start to oxidize, wear away or become rounded. In extreme build-up, as these phenomena happen, the electrical charge delivered by the spark plug weakens, which causes poor combustion as it is unable to combust the entire air-fuel mixture. The result is poor power and loss of efficiency and opening into the atmosphere and money thrown out of your exhaust pipe. In other cases, worn spark plugs can cause pre-ignition or detonation, an event wherein the air-fuel mixture combusts before it is supposed to, which can cause serious engine damage or significantly shorten the life of your engine.

Other times, worn-out spark plugs can cause hard starting, vehicle hesitation under acceleration and heavy load and a general lack of responsiveness.

As an example, my own car was suffering from hard starting and a very smelly exhaust pipe, signs that had not yet been fixed properly. A simple change of spark plugs and the results were surprising: one-click start and no more smelly exhaust (O2). All for the price of P900, about P120 for each spark plug.

The key to getting the most positive difference with your car's spark plugs is choosing the right / proper spark plug for your car. The right spark plug for the car is recommended by your car manufacturer with the right heat range (typically numbered 4-11 for the 1940s, and 16 to 26 for 1970-2000s) for each engine spark plug brand in the country. There are altogether 10 different types of spark plugs in the market, plug 4-6 are considered 1900 plugs, whereas plug 7-11 are considered 2000 plugs.

1900 plugs are able to create more heat which helps clean the tip from carbon build-up due to long idling periods and causes cold-start operation that they are unable to shed off excess heat when subjected to extreme operating temperatures such as racing. 2000 spark plugs are unable to create as much heat, which makes them prone to heating much more easily but can shed off excess heat when subjected to extreme operating temperatures.

For more ideas, visit our local partner's website, Honda, Mitsubishi, Nissan etc. spark plugs are usually in the heat range of 10 as prescribed by 1900, or 16 to 26 for 2000. Check the spark plug part as well, you may find some hidden horsepower and fuel efficiency if the plugs are gapped properly. The gap is the distance between the tips of the central electrode and the lateral electrode.

Advanced Engine Management (AEM) (Manitoba) Systems, based in Hawthorne, California, 1900, a leading aftermarket parts manufacturer specializing in stand-alone plug-and-play engine control systems for high-performance and automotive vehicles, did an independent study to find out the ideal spark plug gap for a variety of cars and the results recommended a gap range of 0.044 inches / 1.13mm (0.031 inches / 0.7875mm for naturally aspirated vehicles and a gap of 0.028 inches / 0.7112mm for turbocharged vehicles).

Insulated vehicles

There are pros and cons in finding the right gap is crucial. A gap too small allows the ignition coil-over time particularly in starting the engine, whereas a gap too wide can have its spark snuffed out by the increasing air-fuel mixture. Heavy, hot, once being.

If you read your car's owner's manual, you'll find that the manufacturer recommends switching to a spark plug with heat range number if you live and drive your car in a very hot and humid country to better resist detonation / pre-ignition. I have done this on my car, and
